

Q

Journal

Media Asia >

Volume 33, 2006 - Issue 1-2

1310ViewsCrossRef citationsAltmetricOriginal Articles

The Role of the Mass Media in the Formation of a Rally-based Pro-democracy Movement in Hong Kong

 Francis L. F. Lee & Joseph M. Chan

 Pages 33-46 | Published online: 20 May 2016

 Source Download citation

 Attps://doi.org/10.1080/01296612.2006.11726809

Abstract

This paper begins by discussing the historical background of democratization and the prodemocracy movement in Hong Kong. The authors then go on to analyse the role the media played in the July 2003 protests that saw half-a-million people take to the streets to oppose the proposed imminent national security legislation.

Additional information

Author information

City University of Hong Kong. Joseph M. Chan is with the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Chinese University of Hong Kong, and the School of Journalism, Fudan University, China.

Joseph M. Chan

Francis L. F. Lee is with the Department of English and Communication at the City University of Hong Kong. Joseph M. Chan is with the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Chinese University of Hong Kong, and the School of Journalism, Fudan University, China.

People also read

Article

4

Social media use and democratic engagement: a comparative study of Hong Kong, Taiwan, and China >

Hsuan-Ting Chen et al.

Chinese Journal of Communication
Published online: 19 Sep 2016

Article

Internet, citizen self-mobilisation, and social movement organisations in environmental collective action campaigns: two Hong Kong cases >

Francis L. F. Lee Environmental Politics Published online: 28 May 2014

Article

Media and Politics in Post-handover Hong Kong: An Introduction >